

I've got to go to school for eight hours. Well, now if I'm incompetent and you're trying to maintain competency you should compel every barber to keep going to school all the time even though there is nothing new to be learned in barbering. We're not allowed to treat any ailments or conditions of the scalp. The only thing we're allowed to do is to refer people to a doctor and if somebody comes to see you and says that so and so told me they got a hair grower, we have to tell them, that's false. That's a sham. You might get alopecia areatus, Senator Koch, which can be caused by nervous conditions and the only thing a barber can tell the person is that you're losing your hair because you're worrying so stop worrying and they worry more and they lose it all. So the best thing for barbers to do is just remove hair from the scalp and the face in the proper fashion. There is nothing in the barber schools which is going to teach somebody anything new who has been barbering for say as many years as I have. Now if they take a book maybe they can tell me the names of the muscles in the scalp or the bones and muscles of the face which have nothing to do with the proper removal of hair from the face and scalp. Sharp clippers, a sharp razor and believe it or not, to shave somebody effectively you don't have to have too steady a hand. You just make sure that between the shakes your razor is in contact with the face and then when you feel a shake coming on you just take it away and then while your hand is away then you talk to the customer to keep him or her, women don't get shaves, that's right, keep him... I'd move adoption of the amendment.
