

Senator Nore was in, who was a speculator in the cattle business. He would go to Verdigre and he would go to the cattle sale and they would run this one-eyed steer through the ring...

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR SCHMIT: ...and Senator Nore said the steer didn't look very good to him. So he went to Spaulding, the same one-eyed steer came through the ring again. The steer didn't look very good to Senator Nore then. Went to Norfolk and the steer came through again, but he looked a little bit better. By the time the steer got down to York, Senator Nore said he wasn't looking too bad. On Saturday he went through the ring at Columbus, sure enough, he looked like a pretty good steer, he had seen him five days in a row and so he bought him. We get in the same situation here. If you run that steer through the ring enough times, he becomes familiar, you kind of become attached to him, and say, let's buy this bill, it's not so bad. Ladies and gentlemen, do not fall for that sort of a situation. You will be embarrassed by it. I ask you to oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT: Senator Goodrich, to speak on the Johnson amendment. Could we have some order, please, so we can hear the speaker. (Gavel). Senator Goodrich.

SENATOR GOODRICH: Mr. President and members of the body, the point I wanted to make was that Senator Marsh, for example, had indicated that it was her intent that any unclaimed deposit or refund, rather, would automatically fall to the unclaimed property department of the Treasurer's office. I just wanted to establish also for the record that just because that is Senator Marsh's intention that is not necessarily the legislative intent because it is not my intent and, therefore, I point out that just because it is one senator's intent that does not make it the Legislature's intent. Thank you.

PRESIDENT: Anyone else that wishes to speak...Senator Marsh.

SENATOR MARSH: Yes, thank you very much, Mr. President. In response to the last comment, I was pleased to learn that the overages are currently turned in as per my comment and nothing would change that procedure, Senator Goodrich, so it
