have merit and I think that we ought to consider on that basis. It's awfully easy to equivocate, vacillate, waiver, apologize, say well we ran out of money. But let's look at it from the other point of view. Does the issue have merit? If so, we ought to appropriate for it and then levy the taxes. If we adopt this procedure and I think Senator, I don't know whether it was Senator Moore or Senator Landis who made the comment, we don't know how this budget system is going to work, but, ladies and gentlemen, if you have ever been out in the forest and there was no moon and you don't have any sense of direction, you'd better wait until the moon comes up at least and so you have some some sense of direction before you strike out or else you go in circles or you may wind out farther from your destination than you had intended to begin with. Better to do nothing than to do something wrong. I think we are proceeding here in the anticipation, in the anticipation of a problem which may not be there and for which there may be a better solution as indicated by Senator Moore. I would suggest, and I have been here long enough to know that the last 15 days of a legislative session is not the most enjoyable way to spend two weeks or even a lifetime or a period of a lifetime. It is just as easy, it is just as easy to make a mistake at that point, far more easy I believe, than to make a mistake when you consider the bills in the more orderly process. I don't have any qualms. I don't think we talked...Senator Landis talked about how we waited and didn't vote on the A bills until after the appropriation bill is passed, but we know what we did. By the time we got there, there usually weren't any bucks left in some instances but that didn't make any difference. If we felt the appropriation bill was more important, then we voted that way, and we always have the chance...

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR SCHMIT: ...to amend the appropriation bill. But I think, ladies and gentlemen, I would hope you would reconsider this motion because I think if you do not, you will come to rue the day. Vote your conscience, it is nothing personal with me, but I want to call your attention to it and ask you to consider it again. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT: There are no other speakers so, Senator Schmit, if you'd like to close on your motion.

SENATOR SCHMIT: I'll be very brief, members of the Legislature.
