PRESIDENT: Debate has ceased. Senator Chambers, would you like to close on your motion, please.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Yes, and, Mr. Chairman, I am angry. Senator McFarland got my dander up. I mean he was actually bordering on starting an argument with me and nothing infuriates me quicker than something like that. But he thought twice, settled into his old calm way of talking and my ire diminished. What we're dealing with in this bill is a situation where the society is reflecting once again its lack of regard for females. A bill of this kind, I can't think of what would impact on a male as much as the decision to have an abortion impacts on a female but if such a piece of legislation were offered here, it would not get out of a committee. But women are always to be downgraded, and I'm not going to stop in finding ways to discuss this matter. First of all, Senator McFarland says let the bill get in a position for a vote to advance to be made and discuss it then; somebody pops up, calls the question, then one, two, three,
