

Pandemonium Carnival colleagues could not cope with. So things began to be blown away. The tents came down, the glass in the house of mirrors shattered into a million shards, and people began running everywhere. The hither to dead horses or unliving horses on a merry-go-round, which, if you rode forward made you older, if you rode backwards, made you younger, took life and they were stampeding off. And Mr. Darl', unfortunately for him, got caught on the merry-go-round when it was going forward, and he got older, and older, and lightning struck him, as always happens, unfortunately, that doesn't happen to his minions around the abortion clinics. But he went around, he got older, and older, he turned into a carcass, his skin got dry, it fell off the bones, he was a skeleton, then he fell to the ground and a very small person came and picked him up and carried him off, I guess, so he could come back again. But then a storm cloud appeared over that area,...

SPEAKER BAACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...a circular cloud came down and swept up everything of Mr. Dark's Pandemonium Carnival, and the next day there were rain-washed streets, the sun was out and everybody lived happily ever after, until we came upon Roe v. Wade, which gave to women the right to make a choice about a very personal and intimate decision. That decision somehow tapped into the worst parts of some people's nature, drew out that little creature that carries the club and is dressed in the animal skin and prevailed on them to release, upon the world, a type of cruelty which, before that time, I didn't think was possible that people would do it and openly embrace it. That it would be done is not impossible, but that they would openly do it, that they would thrive on it, they would embrace it, they would extoll it and say this is what life is about is what seemed impossible to me,...

SPEAKER BAACK: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...this that I'm trying to amend.

SPEAKER BAACK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Hillman. Senator Hillman, did you wish to speak?

SENATOR HILLMAN: Mr. Speaker, members, I've been out of the Chamber accepting trees, and so...awards for a couple communities, so I'm not too sure where we are exactly with this.
