were kind of good. On the philosophical side Scott can be very philosophical. There's one time he was comparing the mood on taxes to that of campaigning around on Halloween and his quote was, "you don't care if you win or lose, you just want it to be over", and many of us just thought a tremendous amount on that one, Scott, that was so...it was just, wow! That was really philosophical, we appreciated that. And he has a medical streak to him, and I don't know if this is because you've talked with Janet more the last few years but in regard to the university administrators who said they had cut everything out of their budgets they possibly could, Scott reached down deep to his medical knowledge and came up with this one. He said, even a starving man can afford to lose his appendix or gal' bladder. That was a good one. That was good. In fact, Janet wrote that one down and there's been a few more surgeries in Nebraska because of that. And Scott can be profound if he had to be. For example, I think all of you will remember when he criticized the Board of Regents over the way their presidential selection process fell apart. It's one of my favorites. His quote was, I don't blame those people, I don't think I'd want to come to work for a board that acts like the Hooterville City Council either. That was a good one. In fact, that was at Lake Maloney when that one came out. A couple other ones we picked out particularly, Scott can be very moral, believe it or not. He can be at times and he sometimes will let slip out things that he really deep down feels and one particular case, it was on a legislative resolution which all it did was encourage the world soccer cup to come to the United States. And after he said this received numerous letters of comments from what he said and his comment on the floor was, soccer is the downfall of today's youth and I was waiting for that to come into the juvenile justice debate, how we could do that, but that was very profound, Scott, we appreciated that, and, of course, soccer since then has blossomed in the state. Two more. The one I particularly liked this year, we were up on...in front here and we were talking and Scott had a quote on one of his bills that he was looking at that had a lot of things attached to it this year. And so I wrote it down at the time so we wouldn't forget it. His quote was, this pig is so fat she'll die of a heart attack before passage, and I thought that was profound and the last one that I think all of us took to heart when he said it is when his quote came out, Secretary of State is not a stepping stone for me. I thought that was going to be very, very profound. Scott, we're going to miss all the one-liners so I assume the Secretary of State as you meet the foreign officials
