got the chairmanship. Is that right, Senator Bromm? Okay, so he is in a similar position to many of us where we're dealing with new material. So I had made it clear earlier that I'm not going to just go after him tooth and nail, because the bill is so broad in its reach and scope that, even had he been a member of the committee, it might be difficult to get a grasp on all of this. So I want to assure Senator Bromm, Senator Crosby is gone but she may be listening, assure Senator Crosby that the amendments I will be offering are not designed to defeat or stop the bill from being passed. But I think it's very clear that what we need, more than anything else, is an understanding of what we are being called upon to do in this bill. Thus far we haven't even gotten to the question of driving drunk as a discreet issue. What I want to be sure of is that laws that we put on the books, especially when we talk about punishments and imposing duties, responsibilities and burdens on people, that there is a rational connection between the burden and the offense committed. And there has got to be...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...a strong link between the burden imposed and the person who committed the offense. I want to be certain, as much as is possible, that we do not, in our eagerness to try to address a problem that needs addressing, I want to be sure that we do not act in haste or use a dull butcher knife when we need a scalpel. Madam President, Madam President, by the way I'm glad to see you back.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: It's quite restful to the eyes, compared to what we've been dealing with lately, and it's pleasant to the ears also I might add. I'm going to withdraw that pending amendment.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: The amendment is withdrawn. Thank you, Senator Chambers. Mr. Clerk, next amendment.

CLERK: Senator Beutler, would move to amend, Madam President. (See FA511 on page 698 of the Legislative Journal.)
