'95. He was an ardent supporter of rural Nebraska and of agriculture, and past president of the Nebraska State Jaycees, and a 50-year service pin from the Masons and so on. He was very active in the community out there and served a number of boards and committees in the area. He's a veteran of the Second World War. But I do have one little story that I've always loved about him because he was Chairman of the Adams County Republican Party for quite awhile and I probably was secretary. I got...always got to take the minutes of every meeting I want to, but those were in the days when the parties weren't so heavily structured as they are now. We didn't have
