January 17, 2002 LB 823, 824

change and a shift in how people felt because the fetus was the dominant factor. And that's what we're dealing with in this bill and the bill says so. My motion says, send this back to committee and let these things be worked out there.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: We're debating the motion to recommit. Senator Quandahl.

SENATOR QUANDAHL: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and members of the Legislature. Just for the record, I would stand and I would oppose this motion to recommit this matter to the committee. And the reason why I originally punched my light to speak on this matter was just to express thanks to, not only Senator Foley, but also Senator Brashear for bringing these issues before us here today. And one thing that I think that the overarching goal that it sounds like, and I'm trying to get a little bit of a temperature of what the Legislature thinks here today, and what the...what our constituents think also. But I think that there is a thought that something needs to be done in this arena, something needs to be passed in this arena. And, that being said, I was drawn to a letter that one of my old law school professors actually wrote to Senator Brashear on March 5th in response to the two bills that Senator Foley had introduced and that were heard before the Judiciary Committee, and that would be LB 823 and LB 824. And this law professor of mine, Josephine Potuto, is currently a professor of constitutional law. As a matter of fact, I took her for criminal procedure when I was at the University of Nebraska College of Law, and she wrote a very, I thought, a very thoughtful letter regarding the basic concepts between...behind not only LB 824, but also LB 823. And she wrote in there, after giving some of her background as a constitutional law...she said that she said in reviewing both bills I see no constitutional impediment in either bill, including an unborn child at any gestational age, within the coverage of wrongful death and homicide. And that's what she wrote, and so if you have any consternation as to whether or not we should actually even be talking about or doing what's proposed in Senator Foley's bills, I think that should be allied by what senator...or what Professor Potuto had wrote. She wrote, and I thought it's...it's important to...to put this on the record, that
