FLOOR DEBATE

January 23, 2004 LB 304

I'm concerned, but I think he was kind of taken advantage of here, and I kind of resent that.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Time. Thank you, Senator Bourne. (Visitors introduced.) On with discussion on the motion to recommit. Senator Mossey.

SENATOR MOSSEY: Thank you, Mr. President. I don't think it would come as a surprise that I don't support the motion to recommit to committee. I think that there is room for work probably between now, General and Select File, possibly address some of Senator Bourne's issues. Particularly to address Senator Chambers, the big difference what Senator Chambers was talking about and what this bill is addressing is Senator Chambers was talking about criminal actions, and those two particular cases, the first case he was talking about, on that snowy night, I know the details that the public doesn't know, which people don't want to hear about. But I'm not going to go into that and tap the Legislature on a criminal action. The intent of this legislation is to provide due process during a noncriminal proceeding. And the reason for that is, unlike teachers or any other profession, you can't go to your local library and pick up a complaint form to file against a law enforcement officer. More complaints are filed against law enforcement officers than any other profession. And that's why the process of due process is included in there. It clears good officers just as much as it gets rid of the bad officers. Had some of this language been in here, there'd be a few officers that wouldn't have a job right now. Some of this part about Senator Synowiecki's is not his fault. He was told if certain language was put in there, certain organizations would support the bill. He was trying to work with them. When he did it, they put their support into it. But the underlining intent of this bill is a noncriminal procedure and the right to due process. And the reason for that is, when you go before...I've only had one complaint filed against me in nine years. When you go up before to have a complaint filed against you, there are several actions that can take place, and if you don't have the right to due process and know about your hearing and what can take place, anything can happen; it would be at the chief's discretion. He could fire you at will, he could suspend you, he
