PEOPLE<sup>31</sup>

In 1800, before Lewis and Clark traveled past Nebraska, several Native American tribes, mainly the Pawnee, Ponca, Omaha, Oto, Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapaho, lived in the area. The largest and most powerful tribe, the Pawnee, had about 6,000 members. In 1913, only 4,784 Indians of all tribes remained in Nebraska because others were moved to reservations in other states. About 16,100 Native Americans live in Nebraska today, with about 35 percent residing on the state's three reservations — the Santee Sioux, Omaha and Winnebago reservations, all in northeastern Nebraska. These reservations are supervised by the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The first Nebraska census in 1854 counted 2,732 residents. At the time, the area was a territory that included parts of present-day North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. The 1870 census, taken after Nebraska achieved statehood in 1867, counted 122,993 people.

In the late 19th century, many European immigrants came to Nebraska seeking free land under the federal Homestead Act of 1862. By 1900, Germans accounted for 15 percent of the state's entire population. Other ethnic groups included the Swedes, Danes, Bohemians, German Russians, Poles, French, Irish, English and Italians. State-wide railroad construction spurred development of the communities where immigrants settled. Following the Civil War, black people migrated to Nebraska, and some of them tried homesteading. Most were lured to urban areas, where chances for finding work were better. The 1880 census showed a total of 2,385 black people living in the state. By 1900 that number had increased to 6,269. Omaha's black population doubled between 1910 and 1920.

Nebraska's Population Today<sup>32</sup>

In 2013, the U.S. Bureau of the Census reported 1,868,516 people living in Nebraska, an increase of 9.2 percent since 2000. Nebraska is the 37th most populous state.

Census data from 2013 showed that 64.4 percent of Nebraskans were born in Nebraska. The data also showed that over half of the state's residents live in the three largest counties — Douglas, which includes Omaha, the state's largest city; Lancaster, which includes Lincoln, the state's capital city; and Sarpy, which has a growing suburban population. Douglas County alone contains more than a quarter of the state's population.

Nebraska's population is mostly white.

In 2013, 89.7 percent of the state's people were white, compared to 77.7 percent for the entire nation. 2013 census data also showed the main ancestry of Nebraskans to be German (38.2 percent), Irish (13.8 percent), English (8.6 percent), Czech (4.8 percent), Swedish (4.5 percent) and Polish (3.6 percent).

People of Latino origin accounted for 9.9 percent of Nebraska's population in 2013 and are the state's fastest growing ethnic group. Blacks were 4.8 percent of the state's population; Asians, 2.1 percent and American Indians and Alaska Natives, 1.3 percent. In addition, 2.0 percent of the state's population reported two or more races.

In 2013, Nebraskans younger than 18 made up 24.9 percent of the state's population, while people 65 and older accounted for 14.1 percent of the population. The state's population was 50.4 percent female and 49.6 percent male.

Nebraska's 10 largest cities, according to the 2013 population estimates, are:

Omaha .....	434,353	Fremont .....	26,340
Lincoln .....	268,738	Hastings .....	25,093
Bellevue .....	53,663	North Platte .....	24,534
Grand Island .....	50,550	Norfolk .....	24,523
Kearney.....	32,174	Columbus .....	22,533

Trends in Nebraska's Population

Since Nebraska became a state, its total population has grown steadily, with the 2010 population higher than in any previous census. The only decade in which Nebraska lost population was 1930 to 1940, when the Great Depression and drought created economic hardships.

<sup>32</sup> For more detailed population figures for counties and municipalities, see Pages 801 and 806.

In 1870, most of Nebraska's population was rural. However, urban living has become the norm. In 2010, about two-thirds of Nebraska residents lived in urban areas, defined as municipalities of 2,500 or more residents. Between 2000 and 2010, 68 of the state's 93 counties lost population. While rural populations dwindle, Nebraska's larger cities and counties continue to grow. Between 2000 and 2010, the population of Douglas County—home of Omaha—increased 11.5 percent, while neighboring Sarpy County grew 29.6 percent.

Nebraska's population is becoming more racially and ethnically diverse. The most significant growth has occurred in the Latino population, which is now the state's largest minority group. From 2000 to 2010, the state's Latino population increased from 5.5 percent to 9.2 percent, growing at a rate of slightly more than 77 percent. The black population also grew from 3.9 percent to 4.4 percent during that time.

While Nebraska's median age increased from 35.3 in 2000, to 36.2 in 2010—the number of Nebraskans age 65 and older decreased slightly during the same time period, from 13.6 percent in 2000, to 13.5 percent in 2010.

RECREATION AND PLACES OF INTEREST<sup>33</sup>

National Areas<sup>34</sup>

Nebraska has two national forest areas with hand-planted trees: the Bessey Ranger District of the Nebraska National Forest in Blaine and Thomas counties, and the Samuel R. McKelvie National Forest in Cherry County. The Pine Ridge Ranger District of the Nebraska National Forest in Dawes and Sioux counties contains native ponderosa pine trees. The U.S. Forest Service also administers the Oglala National Grassland in northwest Nebraska. Within it is Toadstool Geologic Park, a moonscape of eroded badlands containing fossil trackways that are 30 million years old. The Hudson-Meng Bison Bonebed, an archaeological site containing the remains of more than 600 prehistoric bison, also is located within the grassland.

Agate Fossil Beds National Monument in Sioux County contains animal fossils. Homestead National Monument of America near Beatrice was built on one of the first pieces of land claimed under the U.S. Homestead Act of 1862. Scotts Bluff National Monument near Scottsbluff is an 800-foot bluff that was a landmark for pioneers on the Oregon Trail. Chimney Rock National Historic Site, a 500-foot spire carved by the elements, is near Bayard. It also served as a landmark for Oregon Trail travelers. The Niobrara National Scenic River is a popular canoeing river. The Missouri/Niobrara/Verdigris Creek National Recreational Rivers and the Missouri National Recreational River offer land and water recreation and views of the waterways similar to those the Lewis and Clark expedition saw as they crossed the Great Plains.
