LB 921 relates to rehabilitation and reintegration of individuals under probation and parole by establishing mentorship programs led by probation and parole officers. The bill outlines the establishment of mentorship programs, defines key terms, and details the roles and responsibilities of involved parties. It emphasizes individualized support, training for officers in mentorship and restorative justice, and the integration of educational and vocational services. Participation is voluntary, with programs designed in collaboration with community organizations and evaluated for effectiveness, including an analysis of outcomes and cost-benefit ratios.

Section 3 states that by August 1, 2024, the Director of Supervision and Services is tasked with establishing a mentorship program for parole officers, while a similar program will be set up for probation officers, focusing on individualized case management, specialized training in mentorship and cultural competency, and fostering regular interactions between officers and those under supervision. These programs provide targeted support through educational, vocational, and social services, tailored to the needs of individuals under supervision. Participation in these mentorship programs is voluntary, with eligibility criteria to be determined by the director and office, ensuring the programs operate in partnership with community organizations and professionals in mental health and reentry services.

Section 4 mandates regular evaluations of mentorship programs for parole and probation officers by the Director of Supervision and Services, with annual reports due to the Judiciary Committee of the Legislature starting February 1, 2025. These evaluations and reports are comprehensive, covering clear program objectives aimed at reducing recidivism, detailed data collection on various outcomes such as employment, housing, and mental health, and feedback from both clients and officers. They also include case management reviews, comparisons with nonparticipants, cost-benefit analyses, assessments of long-term impacts, and qualitative stories from those involved. Stakeholder feedback, regular public and government reporting, and a commitment to using evaluation findings for continuous program improvement are also emphasized, ensuring the programs are both effective and accountable.

The Supreme Court states the estimated cost to launch and assess the mentorship programs outlined in Sections 3 and 4 is approximately $1,522,400 million for the fiscal year 2024-2025 and $1,560,000 million for 2025-2026, covering the addition of staff for mentorship assistance in each probation district and for program monitoring and evaluation.

The Department of Health and Human Services and Nebraska Board of Parole/Division of Parole Supervision estimate no fiscal impact.

There are several required responsibilities for the Board of Parole/Division of Parole Supervision. Any costs from these responsibilities can be absorbed by the agency.

REVIEWED BY: Joe Wilcox DATE: 01/09/2024 PHONE: (402) 471-4178

COMMENTS: LB 921 requires the Director of Supervision and Services for both the Parole Board and the Office of Probation to establish a mentorship program for parole officers and probation officers, and to provide mentoring services for parolees and probationers. The Board of Parole fiscal note for LB 921 identifies that parole officers currently utilize various mentoring strategies listed in the bill, so there would be No Fiscal Impact to the Agency. I disagree with the Board of Parole assessment. LB 921 also requires establishing program objectives and outcomes, collecting and analyzing data, obtaining client feedback, case management reviews, performing a cost-benefit analysis on the program, and providing regular reporting to government agencies and policymakers. All of these requirements will come at a cost yet to be determined.
