

be to go ahead and freeze those to death who cannot pay and we can find how crematoriums are built and work with the utility companies, the furnace makers and others to figure out how not to let all of that heat generated by the burning of these people who are encumbrances on the land anyway but to distribute and disseminate the heat throughout the structure to be heated. Who wants to have old people around except in the Legislature? Why some crotchety old individual with perhaps a pacemaker who coughs and sputters going up the steps, aren't they in the way? Aren't they in the way now? When you are trying to hurry through the halls and you have to slow down so you won't run over one of them. How about when you see them crimping down the street on a cane? What good are they any more, they can't work. They can't play football. All they are doing is making a high expense from social security for those of us who are productive workers, Senator Lamb, and I work harder than anybody in this Legislature and make less money, but they just create a burden for us. How about all these children that we are going to have here, these unwanted children because some women may have a difficult time getting an abortion. Let them come on into the world and we will burn them, too. Aren't they in the way? Who is going to feed them? Why you will be talking pretty soon about increasing welfare assistance for poor children. Who told the poor to have children? Who is it that wants to make decisions about who can have a child, who must have a child? The Legislature wants to do that but when we say let's provide means for taking care of the children, what do I hear? Another handful of coal to feed the fire of spiraling inflation. Worthy of Scrooge. Scrooge and Marley and Dworak. See, Senator Dworak knows what he is talking about. He knows what he is doing but there are others who mouth words without understanding their full import and it reminds me of what Geoffrey Chaucer wrote in his Canterbury Tales. "He like the parrot was really quite dense, he uttered the words but he didn't have the sense." And that is what we hear a lot of in this Legislature words that sound good. Some people come from insulated, protected environments and others of us live in the hubbub and stream of life all the time. We come face to face with people's tragedy, with their poverty and with their discomforts and the very reactions to these people's problems....

SPEAKER MARVEL: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...by those who claim to have the religion and the ethical standards are what make it easy for people like me to reject all those standards, because
