the industry that feeds us in Nebraska and the best we can do it will be to try our best to make it palatable and to make it as clean as possible and smell as little as possible. From what we talk about I almost wonder if it isn't illegal to run over a skunk on the highway because they don't smell very good.

SPEAKER MARVEL: Senator Lamb.

SENATOR LAMB: Mr. President and members of the Legislature, I feel obligated to defend myself from the scathing attack of Senator Venditte but I think he will agree that the Agriculture Committee has been very responsive, particularly Senator Schmit, to the problem that he has over there in Omaha with the bale fill and that as a result of some of the attention that has been focused on that problem it is not completely eliminated but I think the problem is less than it has been in the past and I would ask Senator Venditte to bear with us that we are all interested in the problem that he speaks of and that we will be concerned and share his concern in the future.

SPEAKER MARVEL: Okay, we have seven minutes left on the bill. Senator Hoagland, Senator Vickers and then Senator Venditte. We have seven minutes.

SENATOR HOAGLAND: Let me reserve my comments, Mr. Speaker, until Senators Venditte and Vickers have spoken if I might.

SPEAKER MARVEL: Senator Vickers.

SENATOR VICKERS: Mr. President and members, I find myself in the same position as Senator Lamb, but I would like to point out to my urban colleagues one thing of what we are discussing about here. We do understand the problem. We live with it too but I would ask how many of you people enjoy a good steak for dinner in the evening or perhaps a nice piece of ham. I happen to raise both types of livestock that produces those two and the side effects that go along with it, if you will, are something that we in the industry attempt to keep at a minimum but remember that food is needed. Those industries are needed and we are attempting to solve the problem as well as we can.

SPEAKER MARVEL: Senator Venditte. Senator Hoagland.

SENATOR HOAGLAND: Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I had a lawsuit involving a feedlot about five or six years ago and I would just like to comment briefly that if this change is made it is going to make it significantly harder for residents who have in some cases legitimate complaints about flies,
