Senator DeCamp and I are fighting each other like cats and dogs so to speak, whether or not that is not a strategy where one flanks you on this side and the other one flanks you on that side and whichever way you go, you're caught. But this is one of those issues where openly we'll agree on the same thing, that when you adopt a rule change or attempt to adopt one like the one proposed here, there are usually certain situations and certain people that you have in mind but you can't stop those people by changing a rule. Believe it or not, when Senator DeCamp and I speak against these types of rules changes we are speaking in behalf of the rest of the people who may not have such facility in using the rules. I have shown in the past when a certain rule change is being proposed how my conduct at that time could circumvent the rule change that was being proposed. So don't change the rules only because you have one or two people in mind that you are trying to stop. You cannot do that. Remember this also. The feelings that obtain on the first day of the Legislature never, never last for the entire session. Those who seem to be bosom buddies on the first day may be trying to plunge daggers into each others' bosoms before the session is over. So don't be deceived by the apparent good feeling that you may experience now and say you are going to vote for a rule in behalf of somebody or for the sake of good feeling. We do know how the rules are suspended. We know under what circumstances they have been suspended in the past. I, myself, have had efforts that I was trying to bring about to stop a bill from moving. I have had those efforts defeated when Senator DeCamp would suspend the rules so that there could be no more amendments offered or so that debate would have to cease or whatever. But even though I have fallen victim to the present rule on suspending the rules, I don't think that is enough for me to be justified in voting for this change. Think about whether or not you can live with the proposition. I will quote Senator DeCamp again. "You can't stop me. You can't stop him. You can't stop Senator Haberman," because he doesn't believe in any kind of gun regulation so he'll get his way one way or the other. So you may just as well leave the rule, this particular one, as it is.

SENATOR CLARK: Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Mr. Speaker, members of the Legislature, the rule isn't about stopping any one person. It is about something called due process and it is something that Americans have believed in from day one whether they were Republicans or Democrats. It means you make a set of rules and once you make the rules you give everybody notice of the rules. And once you have made the rules and give everybody notice of the rules then everybody abides by the rules. And in this
