

We get down to the end, everything that is big is said for the end and then the rules have to be suspended and I'm allowed to be in the position of the one who is condemned as the destroyer to be able to say, you passed your rules now you can't even live with them. You are the ones who had control of the placement of these bills, the schedule according to which they would be debated, how they could be pulled out of committee, how this and that could be added to it and now that a pit that you dug has caught you in it, then you want to bail out and change all of the rules. Well as Senator Hoagland said thirty votes can do it. But, the lesson that this kind of experience should teach will never be learned by the legislature. Every session, not only with this legislature, but wherever you have legislative bodies in the world if they operate under a time limit in everyone of them you are going to face this situation. You could change the name of the state and you would find them all complaining about the same thing. A bill that is considered heavy, that the public demands that is complicated and changes a lot of the existing law suddenly has such urgency that the rules need to be suspended, no amendments can be offered, no debate needs to occur and the bill should shoot right across. Well I think everybody who has a bill would like to have that happen. All I asked for on one of mine was the chance to debate it. I've had that chance now to discuss it. I might have withdrawn my amendments if Senator Hoagland had been a bit more patient. But I ain't going to do it now. The fracturing of the grammar was intentional. I AIN'T GOING TO DO IT NOW! You can suspend the rules on this and you can suspend the rules on every other issue that sits on the board. I think that is probably what is going to have to happen. Because with five days left, there is only a certain amount of time available for processing bills. So what I think you ought to do, those of you who feel like Senator Hoagland you have got other things you want to talk about and you want to stop me from talking about this bill is to suspend the rules. Because if you don't, I assure you I've got other amendments up there and I'm going to talk about the bill. If we adjourn tonight before the bill is acted on, I'll talk about them tomorrow or whenever it comes up again. So see Senator Hoagland and I have put all of you in a box. You have got to accept this bill just like it is right now. Don't even think about another amendment. Don't even think about whispering any more debate. You have got to suspend your rules and you have got to do it on this motion because if you don't other people's motions are going to come up, maybe one of mine and this is the game of checkers that we play. When we have the numbers we feel like we can do
