understanding and in visiting with archeologists, the records are that clear, and the records, and especially of the Historical Society, do spell those things out very, very clearly and everything is very clearly identifiable. So I think that those records are intact.

SENATOR WESELY: What sort of things are we talking about that might have been specifically buried with these individuals, I mean.

SENATOR BAACK: I would assume that in a lot of cases you would be talking about beads, things that maybe would be around the neck of a skeleton, or on the arm bone of a skeleton, or something like that. Those would be specifically identifiable with that skeletal remains.

SENATOR WESELY: Okay. Well, I appreciate very much Senator Baack's explanation and I think clearly the thrust of the committee amendments is in the right direction in trying to provide some clarity. Distinguishing between what is identifiable and what isn't is kind of a fine point but one that could make the difference to some of us as we consider this legislation, but clearly...

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR WESELY: ...we need to proceed on the legislation. I am very happy to have the work of Senator Baack and Senator Chambers in trying to address this issue.

PRESIDENT: Thank you. Senator Chambers, followed by Senator Elmer.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. Chairman and members of the Legislature, since there haven't been a great number of questions on the committee amendments besides the ones specifically asked, I am not going to take my full five minutes, but I just want to state that the committee amendments, all of them, and all parts of them, narrow the scope of the bill, and provide clarifying language. So when we adopt the committee amendments, we are not expanding anything, and with that, I am going to terminate my presentation, but Senator Elmer needed just a little bit of time to get something into the record, so I would yield whatever time he needs.
