

major problem with the College of Pharmacy in the last three years because of the problems we had some years ago of closing it down and all the repercussions that went through there. It's been rebuilt. It's been restructured. It's viable, it's going. The last thing that that particular college needs is to have a year without existence in its present facilities for staff, for students, for the laboratory areas. If you're willing to throw that college into chaos again for another year, then maybe this is the most prudent way to go. I don't know. I am going to listen to the debate. I would like to discuss it at length because I am looking for a good answer.

SPEAKER BARRETT: Thank you. Senator Lamb.

SENATOR LAMB: Question.

SPEAKER BARRETT: Senator Lamb moves the previous question. Do I see five hands? I do. Shall debate now cease? All in favor vote aye, opposed nay. Voting on ceasing debate. Have you all voted? Record, please.

ASSISTANT CLERK: 11 ayes, 15 nays to cease debate, Mr. President.

SPEAKER BARRETT: Debate does not cease. The Chair is pleased to announce that Senator Kristensen has two guests under the north balcony from Minden, Nebraska, Robert and Wanda Bauregard. Would you folks please stand. Thank you. Glad to have you. And in our north balcony, Senator Chambers announces 40 fourth graders from Wakonda School in Omaha and their teachers. Would you folks please stand and be recognized. Thank you. We're glad you could be with us this morning. Additional discussion? Senator Korshoj.

SENATOR KORSHOJ: Mr. Speaker and members, I have many questions about this project. I think we've probably got to go ahead and do something. Senator Hall, could you tell me, how did you arrive at the $100,000, or Senator Withem? I mean, is that just a figure...I can't see we could get much done for the 100,000, and if it's open-ended, how much would we spend testing it?

SENATOR HALL: Well, Senator Korshoj, the 100,000 is a figure that I, basically, took out of the air but I also thought that it was very easy to add that to the $600,000 that the Med Center is currently spending, half of which I think has already been
