

SENATOR CROSBY: ...yeah, on the page...

SENATOR LANDIS: Excuse me, Senator Crosby...

SENATOR CROSBY: ...okay, would you yield?

SENATOR LANDIS: Before Senator Pirsch, needs to be acknowledged that she will yield.

SENATOR CROSBY: ...I think the request to yield...

SENATOR LANDIS: Senator Pirsch, will you yield?

SENATOR PIRSCH: Yes.

SENATOR CROSBY: I think that request to yield is a strange question, but at any rate, if you will yield I would like to ask you a question.

SENATOR PIRSCH: I would yield.

SENATOR CROSBY: About page one, "A resident of Nebraska who is a victim of a crime committed in another state.", give me an example of a victim of a crime in another state and why Nebraska would be responsible for the compensation. I am a little bit confused, I understand about where the funds but I...

SENATOR PIRSCH: This is a federal requirement...

SENATOR CROSBY: Oh, okay.

SENATOR PIRSCH: ...that is required of all the states and I believe it is thirty-seven states have compensation funds. If indeed, and I'm trying to recall a state that did not, if a Nebraska resident was injured, hurt, assaulted or in the case of homicide of course, the family has the same victims rights, that they would fall then under Nebraska's compensation act. But only to the extent that the Nebraska guidelines, and these would be only Nebraska residents.

SENATOR CROSBY: Okay.

SENATOR PIRSCH: In other words, if they would, if they would be victims of crime in another state that did not have a...victim
