

books of Nebraska right now a parental notification law that has been enjoined by a federal judge. This is a numerous times told tale. So the purpose is not to put something on the books that is not already there. The purpose is to harass and burden young women as much as possible when they're trying to make this decision as to whether or not to carry a pregnancy to term. It's kind of ironic that those who are opposed to abortion are so willing to abort the discussion that is necessary of this matter.

PRESIDENT: Time. Okay, Senator Bernard-Stevens, do you wish to close? Senator Bernard-Stevens.

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: Yes, thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT: Senator Labeledz wants to speak.

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: She can if she...on her time?

PRESIDENT: Yes.

SENATOR BERNARD-STEVENS: I (microphone not on) that Senator Labeledz be able to.

PRESIDENT: Okay.

SENATOR LABEDZ: Surprised that he's letting me speak.

PRESIDENT: Him or me?

SENATOR LABEDZ: No. I'm...no, definitely not the Chair. I notice that Senator Dave Landis passed out the editorial from the Lincoln Journal or the Lincoln Star, I don't know which it is, but I read it this morning. And, of course, Senator Landis, we all know that the World-Herald and the Lincoln Journal and Lincoln Star have always been pro-choice, and, regardless, anything to do with abortion they will draw up a very serious and strong editorial. But I was very proud of the World-Herald the other day, on January 18, 1990. They had an editorial titled "Rush To The Screen, It's Tasteless". They were...the whole editorial is about the Stewart tragedy in Boston in regard to that killing of the mother and her baby and I've got to read you one paragraph because we finally got the World-Herald to admit that what she was carrying was not a fetus, it was a baby. And I will read you that part. "But how
