

would know that it was not a good, fair decision once we all went to heaven and found out the truth. I have a comparison, an analogy that I would like...

PRESIDENT: Time.

SENATOR BERNARD STEVENS: ...to throw out when I get a chance. And, Senator Chambers, I believe you might be next, if I could have about three minutes of your time, I would appreciate it. Oh, my apologies.

PRESIDENT: Senator Chambers, you're next, followed by Senator Schmit and Senator Schimek.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. Chairman and members of the Legislature, Senator Bernard-Stevens, were you rational when you asked for three minutes of my time and I only get five minutes, and I've got 25 minutes' worth to say? Mr. Chairman and members of the Legislature, Senator Labeledz rose in her righteous indignation and read off from her sheet various things that she wanted to say with reference to me and my comments about her and her work with Franklin, but she evaded the issue. She did all of this dust blowing and irrelevant chattering about how much she is giving up and she doesn't know what any of us gives up. Some of us don't talk about our personal situations and use them to gain sympathy on the floor of the Legislature to win an argument. But maybe she ought to do a little inquiry before she says that she is carrying a heavier burden than anybody else. Some people just don't blab about things like that. But she evaded the question that I asked. Why is she so willing to send young ladies back to the kind of families who, because of the wrongful conduct they were engaging in, made her cry? You notice how skillfully and adept she was at evading that, as so many of these so-called pro-life people are in dodging the issue, going off on false trails and drawing red herrings. Those of us who oppose this bill give specific reasons why. When I ask her why she wants to send children back to a family like the ones we read about, she says, well, at least I had the guts to stay on the committee. That didn't take guts. And she knows why I got off too. But there will be another time when those kind of matters can be discussed. We're talking about a very bad bill that she has brought. Now there was a situation of a pregnant woman who fell into a coma...I think she may have been in an auto accident or something. The doctors ruled and determined, based on their medical judgment, that the fetus she was carrying
