SENATOR SCHELLPEPER: It's owned by several individuals, Senator, mainly Lester Larsen from Lincoln who has an antique tractor collection and right now they are being stored in several buildings out on the university campus. He's a former engineer with the university.

SENATOR KORSHOJ: So everything that will be displayed will be owned privately, in other words?

SENATOR SCHELLPEPER: That's right. Yeah, it's owned by individuals. They're not giving it to any commission. You will...it's...I think it's just like any other museum where people use it but they don't actually own it, it's owned by some individual, a lot of it is.

SENATOR KORSHOJ: You don't have to answer this question, but when we leave can we take the door with us or not?

SENATOR SCHELLPEPER: I would think...

SENATOR KORSHOJ: Got to have that under contract, if you fasten it, it belongs to the building.

SENATOR SCHELLPEPER: I don't...Senator, I don't even know what type door they're really putting in. It's just going to cost about $2,000.

SENATOR KORSHOJ: Okay, I will yield the rest of my time to Senator Morrissey.

SPEAKER BARRETT: Senator Morrissey.

SENATOR MORRISSEY: Thank you, Senator Korshoj. Mr. Speaker and members, everybody is taking some shots at Senator Chambers here and I think I will take a couple here, too, since he's so close.

SPEAKER BARRETT: Can you do it in 30 seconds, sir?

SENATOR MORRISSEY: Is my light on next?

SPEAKER BARRETT: Yes, it is.

SENATOR MORRISSEY: I'll pass.
