

Ames, Iowa, to participate in an affair called, the Iowa Agricultural Youth Institute. The young people request that I come back every year. I've gone there for ten years in a row.

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I'm the speaker most in demand, that's why they keep inviting me back. I get a bigger block of time than the Secretary of Agriculture, the national speakers, because the young people and I interact. I'm very familiar with the problems that farmers have, and I'm sympathetic, up to a point. And I don't even ask for a quid pro quo. But on the floor, this morning, I would suggest that those who say they're concerned about the farmer not try to deprive the renters of this tiny boon, because it may not benefit the farmers to the extent that you would like to see. If, after we adopt this amendment, you can craft one that relates to farmers who rent, and there are some who are truck farmers and sharecroppers, in effect, and a majority of the farmers, based on the debt that they have, might be considered sharecroppers, I'll help you. But since the amendment to help those in the city is before us today, Senator Nelson, I implore you, I implore you, reach out and touch us. (Laughter.) Thank you.

PRESIDENT: Time has expired. May I introduce some guests, please. Senator Korshoj has a sister here by the name of Marilyn Jackson, from Fremont, and with her is a friend, Ann Benso, from Fremont also, under the south balcony. Would you ladies please stand so we may welcome you. Thank you. Also, in the south balcony, Senator Lowell Johnson has 60 fourth graders from Fremont Elementary School and their teachers. Would you folks please stand and be recognized. All of you students, please stand. Thank you. Senator Schimek, please, followed by Senator Warner and Senator Schmit. Senator Schimek passes. Senator Warner. Senator Warner.

SENATOR WARNER: Mr. President, members of the Legislature, I just wanted to comment that with the amendment that was adopted on the income tax, a few minutes ago, it would appear that property tax, statewide, obviously, will be different from district...the district as far as schools but would appear to go up in the range of 1 percent. So, with these additional sales and income tax, why there would be no reason to increase rent or no reason to decrease, for that matter, the rent that people are paying because of property tax. Perhaps it's more important to
