

safe in sharing with her parents or guardians the fact that she is pregnant is not peculiar to this country. Human nature has certain things in common wherever you find it on whatever continent in whatever part of the world, and in most instances, there is what is called a generation gap where older people don't communicate with younger people because the world is looked at through different eyes, from a different vantage point in terms of experience and values. So if that problem exists automatically, you know that it is going to be aggravated if a situation arises where the young person is facing a situation or is involved in a situation that the young person feels will cause the adults...

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...to whom he or she is responsible or subject to be angry, angry to the point of doing something damaging. It is not unheard of that a young woman who is pregnant has had a miscarriage because of the abuse she suffered at the hands of a family member, the kind of family member we, by law, want to make that young woman run to. In the case that Senator Landis spoke of earlier, the young lady chose to run away from home, and that is the situation that I would like to avoid. Let these young women make the decisions that are there for them to be made. They had help in becoming pregnant. They often are totally alone when time comes for the consequences of that activity to come to fruition. Some young girls would be damaged physically if they had to give birth to a child, even if they chose to, because their body just is not strong enough or developed enough to withstand a childbirth.

PRESIDENT: Time. Thank you. Senator Chambers, you are up but you have spoken too many times. Senator Schimek, you are next, and you have spoken enough.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: On my own?

PRESIDENT: Yeah, on your own. The young lady there...the young lady never tells an untruth. Okay. Senator Landis, you are next but you have spoken enough, but, Senator Conway, you haven't spoken enough.

SENATOR CONWAY: Thank you, Mr. President. I have not spoken at all. I punched in because I believe there is some discussion going on that within a matter of minutes there may be an
