

someone said, they'll use up their exemptions faster, and that's a great thought, very laudable. The point blank truth is, by that time we'll have changed the tax system 15 times providing we don't have any more special sessions because every time we get together we put another patch on the quilt. We're like a cowboy riding through a herd of cattle with a bunch of ropes. He throws the rope one way and he gets a steer over here; he throws another one, gets another steer over here. The steer that can duck his head at the right minute gets away scot-free. The other one gets dragged off and gets slaughtered. Looks to me like it's slaughter house time. Do you know who is going to pay the bill? The corporation that didn't have the money to expand, the corporation that is locked into a system where he is tied to agriculture or some other industry which doesn't make any money, the maw and paw corporation. Yeah, they may make 100,000 or more some year by the grace of God and working 12 or 14 hours a day, seven days a week. We're going to zap them, going to give them a double zap. I will be glad to look at the corporate tax when you're willing to put the whole thing on the line. Senator Landis is one of the more intelligent members of this Legislature. If you don't believe so there is somebody you can ask, including Senator Landis, I'm sure he will reassure you of that, but the point is this. He knows, as Senator Warner indicated, the bill at the present time is outside the call, but it is the time to make some points and so we're doing it. It also sends a warning to the corporate community, you better get your ducks lined up because comes special session, or come regular session time, we're going to be shooting for you. There isn't any way in the world you're going to get an increase in the corporate tax, ladies and gentlemen, until you've done something about the rest of the personal tax. Had you had the collective courage to take off all the personal tax and adopted the rest of my amendment relative to the real estate tax, you would have taken two major steps forward, then you could have talked about the corporate tax because those corporations who still pay some personal tax would have said yes, we've taken a little drop there, we're glad to look at something else. But, ladies and gentlemen, as I pointed out yesterday relative to the Lincoln corporation that maintained their work for us but reduced their payroll by 30 percent. All 49 of us working together cannot outsmart one single CEO of a corporation who has to survive. It's like the dog and the rabbit, the rabbit is running for his life and the dog is running for his dinner and the corporate CEO is going survive. And about the time we head for the farm and think we've got every patch, every hole in the
