SENATOR WARNER: I guess maybe a question for Senator Ashford. First an observation. I assume this is sort of an exception? But, like...

SENATOR ASHFORD: No, it's not an exception.

SENATOR WARNER: ...like states and local governments is what I was thinking.

SENATOR ASHFORD: No.

SENATOR WARNER: Would you explain for me...

SENATOR ASHFORD: No, I got the point.

SENATOR WARNER: Would you explain, so I'm sure that I understand, Senator Kristensen put an amendment on whatever it was, way back, which I thought put some limitations on the kinds of damages. As I listen to your explanation, I'm taking it that in the case of a wrongful death law that some of those limitations for economic, at least some of the economic loss would not be accepted here in a wrongful death situation then. I'm not arguing about the issue, I'm trying to understand...

SENATOR ASHFORD: No, I understand, I understand the question.

SENATOR WARNER: ...its impact.

PRESIDENT MOUL: Thank you, Senator Warner. I'll now recognize Senator Pirsch.

SENATOR PIRSCH: Yes, question for Senator Ashford, if he will yield. Senator Ashford.

SENATOR ASHFORD: Yes, Senator Pirsch.

SENATOR PIRSCH: The section, the sections that you referred to, were they repealed in...

SENATOR ASHFORD: Eighty-eight?

SENATOR PIRSCH: Yeah.

SENATOR ASHFORD: They weren't repealed, but there...
