

amendment, you will not even have LB 732 as foisted on you by the judges and Senator Kristensen in the beginning. So as it changes and changes and they make modifications to try to slide it through, how can they say that the people anticipated all this when they voted for the constitutional amendment and that this is what they voted for? That argument is as weak as cream. I would like to Senator Kristensen a question but there wouldn't be enough time so I'll just fill out mine on this...

SENATOR CONWAY: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...term by saying what I've got to say. I'm not going to support this bill no matter what they do. I think it perverts the system of justice. A 150 appeals filed, suppose they're traffic citations, suppose they're domestic disputes. As Senator Kristensen gave as an example of the kind of matters you don't want before the Supreme Court or something like that, there's a divorce, she wants the dishpan and he wants the dishrag. Well, the judge says I think you ought to have the dishrag and you ought to have the dishpan, so they appeal it. And Senator Kristensen ridiculed those kind of things as trifling and insignificant and maybe they shouldn't even be in court, but if they are allowed to be the basis for an appeal to the appellate court and can be dismissed just like that, how in the world are you going to use the mere filing of...

SENATOR CONWAY: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...150 appeals as a basis to hire another one of these lazy, ne'er-do-well scalawags? What did you say, Mr. Speaker?

SENATOR CONWAY: I'm sorry, time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Time for what?

SENATOR CONWAY: Time for you to quit. Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Haberman.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Mr. President, members of the body, I have spoke on this issue to oppose that part of the Kristensen amendment. I have found some of my research and it shows that the Supreme Court in one state actually had to take some cases away from the appellate court. The Supreme Court ran out of things to do so they turned around and they said, okay, we'll
