

illegally. And a lot of people played them. You didn't have to be a member, because that's how they kept the club going. Well, when he shut it down there was an uproar like you wouldn't believe. And I remember people who, to their grave probably, hated Jim Anderson because he stopped the illegal slot machines. I don't like to sound righteous about gambling, because everyone has things that they like to do. I just happen not to enjoy it, and I always think that it does take money from families and so on, and not just poor families, but families who have a decent income and so on. If somebody is addicted to the gambling that takes a lot of money away from that family that should be used for life's essentials. I understand that one man's sport is another man's boredom. And remember, in the "Music Man", where the Music Man says, just think, they're talking about racing horses these days with someone sitting right on Dan Patch, because up till then they had the little wheels and the man driving the horse, but not riding it. And that was not looked at too beneficently in Iowa, in those days, to sit on the horse. And so I think as we go along when they legalized bingo and started regulating and so on, it opened up a door in our state that I think maybe shouldn't have been opened. Bingo used to be a harmless game the churches and other organizations raised money on in a harmless way. People went and enjoyed each other's company. But the minute you legalize and you start regulating things like that it seems to me that you bring in the lower class of society, and you know that's true. So even though I don't enjoy the gambling, I know other people do. And we already have gambling. We have those paper bingo games now that you get the paper instead of the stiff card and so on. We have horse racing, and I'll admit I've been to horse races and I don't bet much money on, I'll tell you. I haven't been to one for years and years. It kills me to lose 20 cents, I'm just not made that way. But the other thing, I did watch the Derby, Saturday, on television because there is something about the horse. The horse is a beautiful animal, and when it's running there is a real beauty there. And there's a skill in the way the jockey handles the horse.

PRESIDENT MOUL: One minute.

SENATOR CROSBY: So it's a little different to me than the mindless thing of sticking money in a slot machine and pulling the handle. So, from that point of view, we already have that kind of gambling. And if we were going to go along with... maybe we should just put everything on the ballot and we could go
