

going to be affiliated with that particular stretch of the river or stream the guidelines that they have, and then allow the local communities to, within those guidelines, provide the kind of protection that is intended from the state policy perspective. That is the difference. That is why I would resist saying that the Conway amendment guts the plan. What it does is it provides the underlying principle and it is just a different technique, whether we want a broad-based, coordinated effort at the state level or whether we simply want to turn it over to a piecemeal county, by county, by county technique of doing what it is that many of us think probably ought to be done on a wider scale. So with that I offer the Conway amendment to LB 511 and urge the body to support it.
