knowledgeable and very well qualified for their roles as appointees to the Nebraska Arts Council. In fact, I'd have to say that they all left quite an impression on the committee in viewing this with their enthusiasm for enhancement of the arts in Nebraska. I'll touch on just a few of their many and varied qualifications. J. Robert Duncan is presently serving as the council chair. His personal interests included traveling and photography, and among his many civic activities he's been a member of the KUCU Fine Arts Radio Community Advisory Board. Maryanne Harry is a new appointee to the Nebraska Arts Council. She's currently a member of the Lied Performance Board of Governors and was once nominated for the Governor's Arts Award. She also was instrumental in organizing the Lexington Arts Council. Janet Korell is another new appointee to the council. She has studied art herself and has taught art at the McCook Community College. She has a long history of volunteerism in her community. Jacquelyn Rosenlof is a returning appointee to the Arts Council and is currently serving as vice chair. She is a member of the Nebraska Arts Association and brings a love of the arts, knowledge and experience to her position. The final appointment we considered was Jean Sidwell to the Nebraska Arts Council. Jean is a volunteer member of the Kearney Arts Area Council, is presently vice president of the Kearney Community Concert Association, and is a volunteer on a local committee to provide donations for Nebraska Public Television auction. Jean would be a first time member to the Arts Council. The members of the General Affairs Committee voted unanimously to recommend that these five appointments be confirmed by the body and we ask for your approval of this report.
