

with it. But what's a gamble and what's a gamble? What's not? Constitutional amendment fails under 1063, we lose. Constitutional amendment passes under 1063, we lose. Net book gets challenged under 1063, market value comes into place, we lose, ag loses. Can net book stand up under scrutiny? I don't think so. Everything goes back on, we all lose, not just ag, everybody, including the homeowner because it will be bad for business. And you all know I'm not a fan of big business but I do understand they have to make money, not at the expense of the workers, not walking over their backs to make it, but they do have to make money. Little business has to make money to create the jobs so we can pay the taxes. Everything goes back on, we all lose, so let's honestly negotiate from that position. Let's not look at crafting a system that we have to make the farmers pay because they're the ones that will benefit if everything goes back on. Let's go back to crafting a good tax system, a good tax system, fair tax system. I don't think this is it, and the more we hammer around on it, the worse it gets. I think we need to refocus and talk from a position of equality, not from someone that has all the horses going for them now because if everything goes back on, you poor suckers are going to really take a beating, because if it all goes back on, everybody pays, everybody pays. And I...I need to see some numbers. Maybe Omaha would pay worse than the ag area, I don't know. I don't know what happens if all the cars move across the river. What happens if all the meatpacking plants...

PRESIDENT MOUL PRESIDING

PRESIDENT MOUL: One minute.

SENATOR MORRISSEY: ...in the area close down? Is that not inventory? Is that meat not inventory? What happens if we lose thousands of jobs in Omaha because of this? I don't know. Probably just as bad as losing ten in Tecumseh or five in Falls City. So let's start over from a position of equality. Nobody has got the hammer yet, and if anybody does have it, it's ten or 11 senators.

PRESIDENT MOUL: Thank you, Senator Morrissey. Senator Schmit.

SENATOR SCHMIT: Senator Warner made it clear that the purpose of this section was not to penalize the individual taxpayer who unintentionally did not report something. I want to state, for the record, that if there is any item of personal property that
