

won't be that, not even talking to the CA problem that probably it would present, that...who would vote for something. So, not even getting to that issue. And that's why I believe 1063, at this point, represents the best. I'm still open. Senator Schellpeper said we need a better method. Let's have it. We've got to have it, because I think the worst thing we can do is...the first thing we're doing, even beyond all of this is the uncertainty we're creating in the business climate in Nebraska, whether you're an individual, a small business, a small farmer, or a large business, or an international company, the uncertainty we are creating here in Nebraska I don't think we can responsibly continue, allow to continue, whether it's through May, or particularly through November. Who in the world would invest a few thousand dollars, let alone a few million, or even a billion in Nebraska, in any kind of a business not knowing what kind of climate we're going to have here. And I'm really concerned about that. The ripple effect that our uncertainty is sending out across this state, and this region, and this country, and perhaps even the world. I don't want to get too grandiose. But we've got to create some kind of policy and go on with it. And to think that I'm speaking only for myself is erroneous, because I hear this across my constituency, not only in my district but across the state. And I've had calls from other districts last night. I'm like many of you, I'm sure you didn't have hardly any peace at home last night because of the telephone ringing, and it was on this issue. And many of them came down and said do what you think is best because they, I, they meaning they don't know...

PRESIDENT MOUL: One minute.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: ...what to do either, but they are becoming to realize more and more that the uncertainty is going to be...is worse than the cure, or the proposed cure, whatever that may be. So I urge you not to postpone or indefinitely postpone 1063, particularly at this time.

PRESIDENT MOUL: Thank you, Senator Wehrbein. Senator Schmit.

SENATOR SCHMIT: First of all, ladies and gentlemen, LB 1063 is a revenue raising measure. It will give those entities who need, they think, to spend more money access to additional funds. It's going to trigger another new wave of spending. And I hope that all of you recognize that. Some of you know it. Some of you are too naive to believe it, and some of you won't
