

SENATOR MOORE: You need to ask me more directly before I can try and answer. I guess, I'm not...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's too obtuse.

SENATOR MOORE: That's too obtuse for me to answer.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, the fact that cigarettes kills...that cigarettes will kill more people than all of the illegal drugs put together does not trouble you.

SENATOR MOORE: It does trouble me.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: It doesn't trouble you enough to make sure that it's outside the reach of our children.

SENATOR MOORE: Well, marijuana has, historically, not been legal and I don't think it should be. Cigarettes, for a variety of reasons, for hundreds of years have been legal, and I don't want to turn back the clock that far.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But you want to keep cigarettes. Are you aware that...is it illegal for minors to have cigarettes in this state, or to smoke cigarettes?

SENATOR MOORE: I know it's illegal for them to purchase them. I don't know if there's a possession statute, I do not believe so.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But it's illegal for them to purchase.

SENATOR MOORE: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Why then do you want to place these machines where minors can purchase?

SENATOR MOORE: Well, my intent is to place these things where adults can purchase them.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So you call this the principle of double effect. There are two negatives effects but you're going to ignore one of them in order to achieve the one that is your desire.

SENATOR MOORE: Coupled with the fact by eliminating them you
