

as many as there are counties in the whole state.

SENATOR MOORE: Well, the only concern I have on that issue is the Crime Commission is arguably financially strapped right now. There's been other times previously where we've passed legislation 'cause the Crime Commission said there'd be no fiscal impact and then soon thereafter they came back in and said, well, to implement this law we need additional staff time, and so I guess my question to you, it's not your intent to give them additional people to do that.

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: The answer to that is "no", and we have talked with them and they said this was a reasonable place to put it and they did not anticipate needing more staff.

SENATOR MOORE: And in...

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: And it's not my intent to appropriate...

SENATOR MOORE: Not your intent a year from now or...

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: No.

SENATOR MOORE: ..two years from now to come in and say, well, to really do this we need a couple of people at the Crime Commission to organize it across the state. You fully believe it should be able to operate on its own, so to speak.

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: Right. And if it...if it doesn't, I will reexamine what we're doing because I do not want to create another level of bureaucracy in order to make this happen. This really is responsibilities of people already and it is saying you ought to function in a way that is more effective and more efficient on behalf of the children.

SENATOR MOORE: And then lastly, going back to the locals once again, I mean you are mandating this happens...

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: Um-hum.

SENATOR MOORE: ..correct?

SENATOR RASMUSSEN: Um-hum.

SENATOR MOORE: I mean, it's a...and it's a mandate on local
