the abortion. Women who had been oppressed, who had been demeaned, who had been treated as though they were subhuman by the church, by the politicians and by the society dominated by males took to the streets in huge numbers and literally intimidated the highest court in Ireland to back away from that wicked decision that the lower court had made and allowed that young woman to go to England and obtain the abortion. So this is an issue where political power makes the determination.

SPEAKER BAACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Since it is a highly politicized issue, it's going to be in the Legislature but I think this is the last place it should be under any circumstances. I look at how the Legislature the other day refused to advance the family leave bill and today we're going to talk about family values. That family leave bill was to provide time for women and even men, if they are going to adopt, who are faced with childbirth or the adoption of a child to have some unpaid leave time to, as they say, bond with the child. This Legislature, a majority of whom would say that they are opposed to abortion, did not want to allow for that leave time to be given. My time is running out so I will put my light on, but to give you an idea of what I want to talk about the next go around is the way the Reagan administration politicized this issue. This man who said he believed in family values but was divorced, who said there should be prayer in school but he didn't go to church,...

SPEAKER BAACK: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...he wanted it in school because that's a place he didn't have to go. Then, oh, what, time...

SPEAKER BAACK: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...is up?

SPEAKER BAACK: It's up.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: All right.

SPEAKER BAACK: Before I proceed to the next speaker, I would like to introduce some more guests of the Legislature. We have some guests of Senator Nelson and they are 61 fourth graders from Wasmer Elementary in Grand Island and their teacher. Would
