LB 78

SENATOR BOHLKE: ...procedure, I mean we are talking about things such as, very simple things, such as a Pap smear, a pelvic exam, a cholesterol check, an eye exam, a hearing exam, any physical exam. We are supposed to think it over. How about how many of you have had children and gone to the hospital in the middle of the night when they have an ear infection and they have to have their eardrum lanced? This is a simple medical procedure. Are we supposed to tell that child what they are going to experience, and then send them home to think it over? This is what this type of argument, the road it leads us down. How about optional procedures such as a breast implant? How about breast reconstruction? How about a cornea transplant? That could be optional. Should we think it over? Should we take 24 hours while that cornea is there? What happens then? Tubal ligation.

SPEAKER BAACK: Time.

SENATOR BOHLKE: Vasectomy, hyster...did you say time?

SPEAKER BAACK: Yes, time.

SENATOR BOHLKE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So, as I said, I rise to support the Landis amendment and I ask that many senators who have been here for many more sessions than I to support this and treat it as a new direction for this Legislature and a way of leading this state on focusing those issues upon which we should be giving our attention. Thank you.

SPEAKER BAACK: Thank you, Senator Bohlke. Senator Schimek, you are next.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Thank you, Mr. President and members of the body. I'd like to thank Senator Chambers for his explanation of some of the procedural pitfalls, perhaps, with the adoption of this amendment, and, Senator Chambers, I have pause to think about it and I still haven't decided whether I am going to support this amendment or not in spite of the fact that I like this amendment. I particularly like the part that many have been talking about here this evening, the part that deals with adolescent pregnancies, and I'd like to say that if we haven't done anything else with this discussion, we have taken eight hours, nearly, to discuss a very important issue that we would never have gotten to otherwise. I mean, I think that we've put a focus on this issue that just gets lost in the shuffle with
