

in addition to their existing authority for determining valuation so that a litigation could most likely be avoided and, hence, avoiding revenue shortfall, depending when a case may be filed for...by local government. Again, I want to repeat that the estimate of four and a quarter million is based...was done by the Department of Revenue based on figures from 1990, when there were a number of these numbers available, together with information that was submitted by, at least in part, some of the carlines and railroad companies so that the methodology could be applied. I think that it is prudent to follow that course because greater stability is likely to be available under this provision. Certainly it's going to remove the argument of those who have consistently said that the railroads and carlines would pay nothing under 1063. My opinion, this eliminates much of that argument and assures that at least this level, in addition to the 15 million in property...real property, is otherwise paid or, in other words, we're talking of something in excess of 19 million dollars in real and personal property tax paid as opposed to a little over 20 million in real/personal property tax paid, and I think that that stability, avoiding the shortfall or refund potential for local government makes this a prudent amendment. I hope the body adopts it.
