

seat belt?

SENATOR HORGAN: I don't know, I guess that would depend on the family, Senator.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: If the child is four feet six and the father is six feet two with a very, very bad temper and doesn't like to be crossed, can the child make the father wear a seat belt?

SENATOR HORGAN: I don't know, Senator.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But you want the child to get the ticket?

SENATOR HORGAN: The child would get the ticket.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And that's what the State of Nebraska desires to do to its children?

SENATOR HORGAN: Well, Senator, the same...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And I'm being serious because I know...I know parents who have their kids drive them sometimes to the store, sometimes they might be somewhat inebriated and they will have the child cart them around, but they get the ticket.

SENATOR HORGAN: Senator, the same would be true if the child was driving and the father threw out a bag of garbage or if the automobile did not have a current license plate, the child would be ticketed and not the father.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's not what we're talking about, Senator Horgan. We're talking about a situation where you knowingly and intentionally are going to make one person responsible for the conduct of another when he or she had no way to control that other's conduct. Does that make you feel comfortable, or you just don't care?

SENATOR HORGAN: It does, Senator, because it's consistent with other laws that we have in Nebraska.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Could it be possible that other laws are equally unjust and that to compound injustice by adding additional injustice does not make the first injustice right?

SENATOR HORGAN: Senator, the driver of an automobile is the one
