LR 1

SENATOR HALL: I would have no problem with that, as long as it was not too narrow of an interpretation to I guess, say, for example, there is a tract of land that a farmer owns, and I have to use your time because I'm way down the list.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's all right, because I asked you.

SENATOR HALL: Okay. And 85 percent of it is used for agricultural purposes. On the other 15 percent he runs a machine shop. What does the term "exclusively" do to that individual, or at least to the assessment of his property? And the percentages can change, I guess. But what happens at that point? What's your intent?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: If the machine shop is there for the purpose of repairing his or her machinery and equipment that would be used in conjunction with the agricultural or horticultural activities, it would not apply. But you could, under the language of this constitutional amendment, have a commercial machine shop which brought in far more money than the agricultural part, 85 percent could be used, it doesn't say that it has to be productive. It says it has to be used for that purpose, so it could be rocky, it could not have enough nitrate or other things that are needed in the soil to grow anything, but you could make the effort and designate it as being used for that purpose...not...You don't have to be successful as a farmer to be called a farmer,...

SENATOR HALL: Right.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...and, in fact, many are not.

SENATOR HALL: Right, it says actively.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Right. So you could have a much more lucrative activity, and that land would be valued, for tax purposes, only on the agricultural use and not the other. And this constitutional amendment, based on its terminology, as I read it, would mean that you have to disregard the other value, because the amendment says and contemplates a different value that the land would have and perhaps a higher value. But if it's used actively for agricultural purposes, you disregard the other. And it doesn't say it has to primarily be used for agricultural purposes, no percentage, nothing, if it's actively used.
