

lights on, Senator Chambers, would you like to close on your motion to reconsider?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. Speaker, I will close, but I would rather be able to continue speaking. But I've taken my allotted time. This proposal does contain two propositions. And as I stated at the beginning, perhaps neither one standing alone would have a chance of success in this body. But I don't know that to be the fact. Nevertheless, I have to do everything I can to keep the issue before us and keep trying to bring those items to a vote that may be beneficial to the group of people that I think are entitled to help. I do a lot of reading, I do a lot of listening, sometimes I watch football on television, sometimes I watch as much as I can stomach of the television evangelists when I want a little humor, sometimes I watch these humor programs, supposed humor programs which are not funny at all, but they're funny to the drunks in the audience, and that gives me pause to think about the human condition and what happens to people when they're in certain surroundings. People are affected by the surroundings in which they find themselves and they are influenced by the people around them. Unfortunately, in the body at this time during this session of the Legislature the influences are not wholesome. Politics par excellence and pure are at play here. And unfortunately the weakest ones are going to suffer the most. I can't wait for January when Senator Lindsay is going to be standing up over there trying to put more burdens on women, and when Senator Rasmussen will be trying to stop her, Senator Hillman will be trying to stop her. You know what I'll be doing. Senator Nelson may even find her tongue to speak on behalf of those again. Maybe old Senator Will, I know Senator Wesely, his hands won't be in his pockets, him standing over there being whipped to death by his conscience and me, he'll be over here speaking, or at least voting correctly. Senator Schimek won't be shuffling papers, she'll be trying to think of those things that can be said to help women vindicate their right to choice. There will be old Senator Schmit, I see him coming in speaking for those in the womb whom he considered to be unborn children, and I'll have to say then what I can say now, at least Loran is consistent. When we were spending money and others were trying to take it, he felt the same way. But, Senator Schmit, I can't say that about your fellow antiabortion senators in here. You know who they...haven't you heard them talk about that helpless, little, defenseless child in the womb and they've said it must be born. Where are they now? They're not even in the Chamber, they're someplace hiding because they
