SENATOR CHAMBERS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Senator Lindsay a question, and it is not just because he is up there. I didn't realize he was in the Chamber, but now that I see him, I would like to ask him a question. And as you make it to your seat, Senator Lindsay, I am going to ask you the question. Are you...

SENATOR LINDSAY: Okay.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Are you against this amendment?

SENATOR CONWAY: Senator Lindsay.

SENATOR LINDSAY: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you. May I ask Senator Wesely a question.

SENATOR CONWAY: Senator Wesely, would you respond?

SENATOR WESELY: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Senator Wesely, are you against this amendment?

SENATOR CONWAY: Senator Wesely.

SENATOR WESELY: No, but I will be voting against it, I think, at this point.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you. Then why was Senator Ashford asking me what I would do if such and such happen when the people who would be the ones necessary to vote for this amendment say they are going to vote against it? Why ask me? But the ones whose votes are necessary are saying constantly that they are going to vote against it. What is there for us to talk about? What is there for us to reason together upon? Why ask me this question when they are the ones who are adamant. While Senator Wesely is at Senator Lindsay's questions...I mean at his mike, I want to ask him a question. Senator Wesely, are you adamantly opposed to this amendment?

SENATOR CONWAY: Senator Wesely.

SENATOR WESELY: (Mike off) No.
