SENATOR JONES: Yes. And another reason I was kind of concerned too, if you take a ten-mile radius and that's 20 miles between towns, you know, and that would actually encompass all agriculture ground practically in the state that it could be...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: But practically it doesn't...

SENATOR JONES: Right. Right.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...because, I mean, yeah, a project of this magnitude is not going to come to Minden...

SENATOR JONES: Not a...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...or Broken Bow, is it?

SENATOR JONES: No, I don't think so.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: And it's probably not going to come to Kearney either.

SENATOR JONES: I understand maybe Scottsbluff, maybe, somebody said,...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Well.

SENATOR JONES: ...that was brought up too.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yeah. I think it would be fairly slim if they would do that. But the purpose for you is to narrow down so they couldn't use this as much?

SENATOR JONES: Yes. And I was thinking about CRP acres that they were blighted areas, you know, that could even come into this affect too, and I don't know...see how they would work into the picture too.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Okay, but under...you understand that they will still pay tax on that piece of property at that rate so it isn't like they're losing property tax.

SENATOR JONES: Yes.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: And eventually they're going to gain that
