get it in our mail box, you know, and I'm not sure exactly how they do it. There's some mystical way of finding out who all lives there and everybody gets one of these things, and so, you know, that's my intent is to give as much notice as possible. I agree, there could be some questions about residents and who is a resident and who isn't, but in my answer to Senator Beutler our intent, my intent is substantial compliance and a good faith effort and if they miss you and send it to your wife, assuming you live together some of the time, I think that would be notice to both of you.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Well, I think that's right and if we're going to do that then I think we ought to put in some provision that this is determined to be constructive notice because, in effect, that's what publication is, is a constructive notice and I don't have problems of putting that in either. My problem is the way that it's worded, it says that you've got to...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...mail it to the residents and I'm just thinking that's an impossible task to determine who all the residents are and it's also silent as to what time. I would suggest let's look at some of the zoning laws in terms of how we give people notice of zoning changes because they do utilize posting, mailing actual notice, and I think they also then do some publication as a form of a constructive notice and the combination of all three of those probably gives you a good basic notice, fundamental, and, Senator Bromm, what I will probably do is I'm going to vote no on your amendment but I'm going to start to look at for some of the zoning requirements for notice and see if we can't put that in. If your amendment passes, I may come back and try to amend it later. And if it doesn't pass, let's take another run at it...

SENATOR BROMM: Sure.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...somewhere down the line. Thank you.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator. Senator Coordsen.

SENATOR COORDSEN: Thank you, Madam President, and members of the body, I think we have our fine experienced legal minds at work here. It's probably a good time for a simple person to come back around and say this is only out in front of any legal
