

mess, white folks' mess, as we say in the ghetto, which is what white people call the place where people such as I live. They love to label, they love to characterize, they love to stereotype, then they treat people in accord with the stereotype. Then they are offended when the black man or woman does not conform to the stereotype in the way that I will not conform to the stereotype. But when they talk about the federal government encroaching, and doing such bad things, I saw an article in the Sunday World-Herald about the hundreds of millions of dollars in farm subsidies that come to this state. If the federal government said, okay, we are not going to give you that money. You don't give this much money into the federal treasury, go to your State Legislature and let them give you this money. Right now there is a dispute about how much is going to come out of the General Fund for the ethanol production. So we are going to take away the farm subsidies, and that will make the farm area people happy because they are the ones who believe in states' rights. Then do you know what we'll do, we'll take away all that road money that you get from the federal government. We will take away that money for all these high-tech radar and other aids that they give to law enforcement. We will take away the money that you want to build jails. We are going to take all of that away, and because the states would not provide anything that approximated medical care of any worth, there came Medicare and Medicaid. So you are mad about having to spend so much money on poor people for medical problems, we are not going to give you anything for Medicaid. We are not going to give you anything for Medicare, and let's see what the states can do. All this posturing, all this yapping by all of these white people about being angry at their white federal government, then I hear these whiny white men talking about how they are being discriminated against. White men control the U.S. Senate. White men control the U.S. House. White men control the U.S. Presidency. White men control the U.S. Supreme Court. White men control the Nebraska Supreme Court. White men control the Nebraska Legislature. They control every governing body. White men control the movie industry. They control the publishing industry. They control the finance industry. What do they not control? Poverty. And they are going to whine and say they are discriminated against. Well, let me tell you this, my white brothers, you give to black people what you are laboring under. We will gladly assume what you call discrimination in reverse. You cannot be allowed into executive suites and you say you are discriminated against, and we cannot get in the front door for an entry-level job. We hear
