

the IRS does to make people pay taxes, Senator Beutler is right about them having a lot of rules and so forth, but there are so many people who don't pay taxes to the tune of billions of dollars, that new intrusive rules are being put together by the IRS, whereby when they audit you now, all those of you all they assume to be crooks, they are going to look at what they call cultural items, the car you drive, the furnishings in your house, the clothes that you wear, the things that you give to your children. In America,...

SENATOR LINDSAY: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...where you are supposed to have freedom, they believe that most people in America are crooks, and they believe the worst crooks, the most unrepentant crooks are those of us in public office and these bills won't change that.

SENATOR LINDSAY: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Vrtiska.

SENATOR VRTISKA: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, although you are not the Speaker. Anyway, thank you. I just wanted to ask Senator Beutler a couple of questions, if I might. First of all, I guess I need to tell you that I oppose the Bernard-Stevens amendment, and I guess that's what we are really on, but I would like to ask Senator Beutler, in that line, a couple of questions, if I might.

SENATOR LINDSAY: Senator Beutler, would you respond?

SENATOR VRTISKA: I have been reviewing the sheet that you handed out regarding the funding and how it would...how you would anticipate that it would work if this, if your bill is, in fact, enacted? Is that right? The sheet that you handed out to us.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Yes, Senator.

SENATOR VRTISKA: Well, one of the things that has been troubling me and I have been thinking about this; I am like Senator Chambers, it is starting to eat inside of me, but I will let that pass. I won't have any problems I am sure in getting over this, much like the flu that I had last week. But my question is, do you, and I know this is certainly off the wall, but do you have any idea, have you ever thought about when you put this together how much...how many of these people might
