

around, probably so.

SENATOR PIRSCH: Well, I know that you have only 10 days allotted in the fiscal note for a special master. Ten days seems like a very small...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Short period of time, doesn't it?

SENATOR PIRSCH: Yes, it does.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: I didn't do the fiscal note and I can't tell you how they arrived at that figure other than that's probably some of the things that came over...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...from the Department of Revenue or from their best guess. I honestly don't know how they get that figured up. In terms of salary, you may not need those special masters either in any one given year unless you have like Senator Vrtiska talking about the 10,000 protesters either.

SENATOR PIRSCH: You may need more at the up front though in the beginning...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: You certainly could, and you may have...

SENATOR PIRSCH: ...then as this develops.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yes. Realize that the Department of Revenue also has a wealth of information that they're going to be able to...

SENATOR PIRSCH: Sure.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...bring across too.

SENATOR PIRSCH: Okay, well thank you, Senator Kristensen. I, too, like others who have asked questions, are not really sure how I could support this. I keep thinking of the Board of Parole and their full-time...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Time.

SENATOR PIRSCH: ...six-year terms where they are supposed to be
