

proficient in their job and sadly lack.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Pirsch. Senator Robinson.

SENATOR ROBINSON: Madam President, members of the body, Senator Kristensen, Senator Vrtiska said he had one more question. I said if I have time at the end, you'll get it, you won't get it at the beginning. The question I have, Senator Bromm, I think it was Senator Bromm said that one of the three would be lawyers? Is that correct?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: That's correct, Senator Robinson, yes.

SENATOR ROBINSON: They all three could be, couldn't they?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yes, we don't disqualify them because of their profession.

SENATOR ROBINSON: I thought that was...the change is very diligent though. You know, I thought it was very diligent in that change, but is there...what kind of a background...okay, I'm the Governor and what kind of a person do I look for that could be...are they CPAs or are there any qualifications whatsoever listed in the bill? And I should know that but I don't.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Senator Kristensen.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yes, there are, Senator Robinson, and I would.

SENATOR ROBINSON: Just verbalize a couple of them.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Okay, they've got to have knowledge of the depreciation theories of cost estimating, capitalization. Basically we're talking about valuation. If you'd ask me what things would be helpful to them, would be some education in the financing of property, the valuation...

SENATOR ROBINSON: Where would you look for people? Who would you look at?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Oh, I think you'd have to look at people who have, maybe even people who have been in county government who have been on the top end of doing mass appraisal techniques.
