

and says, ah, I am not going to do it and come get me. Because there, if you're going to have to take legal procedures, it's going to take awhile. The ability to suspend somebody if something bad is going on is there. The tax commissioner has always had this power.

SENATOR ELMER: Yeah, I understand that but...

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yeah.

SENATOR ELMER: ...ultimately, if we don't have something like this, even if they send out this mandamus, and the official says, heck, you can't do anything to me, is that the case, can they, if they issue the mandamus?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yes, they can still, because the mandamus, yes, they will still be in business and operating.

SENATOR ELMER: Okay.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yeah. Senator Elmer, with your discussion, of course, I've got my light on and I don't know where I am at, and I don't want to take your time, but I think I could draw it better than the way I have it.

SENATOR ELMER: Okay. Thank you very much, Madam President.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Elmer. Senator Kristensen, your light is next.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Madam President, thank you. Are there other lights on?

PRESIDENT ROBAK: There is one further light, Senator. Senator Lynch.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Okay, and, Senator Lynch, I will be glad to answer your questions too. I would hope that the body would...for those of you who are paying attention procedurally, obviously, with the way our rules are, I can't withdraw this portion because the amendment has been divided, and so I am asking you to vote this section down. I will be voting against my second portion of the amendment, and I will do that so we can get on with this amendment. I will make attempts to redraw that so there are some more procedural safeguards, and I will try to
