

their state and vote by ballot and then if you talk about types of people, no, it talks about two people, yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And for president and vice president.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Ahhhh...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Does it say anything about lists kept of people voted for?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Right, and transmitting it to...I mean it's a procedural matter, yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Now, can the Legislature change any of that?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: I think that's preempted by Congress.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Can the Legislature...okay. Do you agree that when the electoral college was created they had the power to deviate from what the popular vote was?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And there may have even been instances when the electoral...the electors selected somebody for president who was not president based on the count of the popular votes.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: I don't know.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But here is the point,...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...would you agree that this provision will take from the electors a prerogative which they currently enjoy pursuant to the language in the U.S. Constitution?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: It will restrict their ability to vote for who they want to.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Does it take away a prerogative that they have right now?

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: I'm not sure of the legal term of prerogative, but it will take away their choice of who they are
