

college or university. I'm not sure of the figure on that, but that would be another option as well.

SENATOR JENSEN: Okay. I think the real thing that we need to think about here, and that's as I said before, I do support the welfare reform bill. I think it is somewhat liberal. I think it is somewhat generous, but if we can achieve, at the end of two years, individuals who then must...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR JENSEN: ...get a job, must have either that or get into a training program, and I think this is really what the general public wants. They are tired of the lengthy period out there. They're willing to help people on a temporary basis and do whatever it takes to get these people into the job force. And once that is accomplished and they're off the welfare roll, I think people will be generally happy. And so, with that, I thank you for your time and thank you, Senator Wesely, for your information.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Jensen. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President, members of the Legislature, and Sister Pirsch, I think I heard you say that if people could be free of forced taxation for six years, they'd be happy to kick in that seventh year to help others. Well, if what I read offends you or irritates you, you have to take that up with Jehovah because he's the one who laid down those principles and specifications, not me. But, at any rate, in talking about how hard we had it, Abraham Lincoln went to school in a log cabin. How many advocate building schools according to the architecture of a log cabin? Somebody might say I had a teacher who didn't know A from bullfrog, but, by God, he really knew how to enforce discipline. We require a little more than that in the way of teacher training. When Terry Carpenter was here, he said if these people out in the rural areas want to have a mule skinner for a teacher, let them. We want something a little more than what a mule skinner knows. But, Senator Pirsch, I've never in my life had a job that required any education. Really, Senator Witek, that's true. The army didn't require it. Oh, I did have to learn how... I had to know how to read, but that didn't... you didn't have to know how to read very well because one check and you couldn't read that well. I worked at the post office of the United States. That didn't require any education. I worked on
